

EDWARDS IN APPEAL FOR
LAW RESPECT*Dixon Jurist in Stirring
Address at Carroll
County Meeting

Asserting that the youth of today enjoy to much luxury and ease and that they should be under greater restraint, Judge Harry Edwards of this city pleaded for teaching of sublimation to law in his address at the Carroll County Old Settlers' picnic at Lanark Thursday afternoon. Judge Edwards said in part:

"I am indeed pleased at the enthusiasm of such a gathering as this, a gathering of a kind that is really a pretty custom, an inspiring remembrance of the pioneers of these early days, who by hardship and toil, made what was then a wilderness, into a lovely garden it now is. To them this splendid community of today owes much. It is a delight to see their spirit keen and alive and I earnestly hope that fifty-two years of like endeavor and achievement may balance the fifty-two already past, for it was no easy task for those pioneers to carve the primitive into the civilization of today. It requires pioneers with hard and sturdy stuff in their hearts, fortified with an undying faith in the Divine. Unrewarded they came, unrewarded they passed away, leaving in their sons and daughters who remain."

"Gatherings of this kind, old settlers meetings, are one of the greatest of holidays, ranking with Memorial day, Fourth of July and Armistice day. On these days we draw lessons from the past to serve us in the future, on these days we teach lessons of patriotism necessary for the youth of America if it is to continue in the ways of the glorious Republic, for lessons of citizenship are of primary importance to every one who claims to be a true American."

Most Teach Submission.
"The first lesson we must teach our youth is that of submission to lawful procedure, thus avoiding excesses. Government, to endure, must exact loyalty from its every citizen, the loyal hearts of its men and women must glow with national pride, for patriotism is the very foundation of all national government. Patriotism must be inate in every loyal citizen. The authority vested in every officer in America is by virtue of the consent of the governed, citizens for the common good. The citizen of the state, in his power less perpetuity of the government, and every citizen must have respect for law and for authority. Only a law abiding people can know the benefits of self-government and the blessings it bestows. A nation is strong or weak according to the respect of its citizens."

Need Righteousness.
"And the main requisite for civic loyalty is common righteousness. National honor is ruined by immorality, by dishonesty, by crime, for patriotism has a spiritual basis set in the inner consciousness of every citizen fortified with truth and righteousness. All ends are subservient to the public good and official corruption from the misuse of suffrage is ruinous to the nation. Right living is the essence of good citizenship with love of country ever taking possession over love of self or love of money."

"The once pure strain of American citizenship is diluted! No longer is there respect and observance of the laws of the country; instead, the law is obeyed—when it is obeyed—because of fear of the penalty which disobedience involves. The crime that is rampant here today shows something is wrong with the people, something which must be remedied. The people lack righteousness."

"But how can we get back to the former manner of righteousness? That is the great question and one answer is that respect for law must be taught the youth in place of merely talking law enforcement."

Too Much Luxury.
"The youth of the land has too much luxury, too much ease. He is idle, day after day, he has no stern conditions of living to contend with as did his ancestors, he is shielded by his parents from every hard knock. Instead of giving the youth nothing save that which is enervating, make him get up in the morning and go to work for the day and see that he is in bed, instead of tearing over the highways with his glaring headlights."

(Here the applause was tremendous.)

"In the words of good old Ben Franklin, 'Light again the lamp of industry and economy.' Once upon a time people sought to have a home and a family, now they seek only to have a good time. It is thrift, economy, and industry which make good citizens and in turn a good nation. Hard work never hurt any one, although parents seem to have forgotten it. It is they, the parents, who are responsible for the idle toys of children in the world today, and the parents are hurting their country. This maddened rush of the present must be checked or our children will go down and down in the social scale as did the Roman empire with its life of luxury and ease. That which

KILLED WHEN
SCAFFOLD FELL*Clyde Bauder and Frank Garst Thrown Into Mill Race

Clyde Bauder, age 49, proprietor of the Bauder Machine Works in Sterling, was killed, and Frank Garst, an employee was painfully injured late Friday afternoon when a scaffold on which the two were working, repairing the roof, collapsed under them.

The scaffold had been built overhanging the mill race at the foot of Locust street, and when it collapsed the men were precipitated to the race wall, from which they rolled into the ten feet of water in the race.

In falling Bauder struck his head on the stone wall, probably dazing him, and he plunged head first into the race, his head being crushed on a rock at the bottom. His skull was fractured and probably death was instantaneous, as no water was found in his lungs when his body was rescued from the water.

Had Bad Leg Fracture.
Garst suffered a fracture of his right leg just above the ankle, the bone protruding through the flesh, and he will be incapacitated for several weeks.

The unfortunate victim of the tragedy was not married, living with his aged widowed mother.

NEWSPAPER EDITOR
KILLS BYSTANDER
IN FIGHTING JUDGE*Row in New Mexico Leaves
Death in Its Wake—
Judge Wounded

East La Vegas, N. M., Aug. 22—(AP)—Political enmity between Carl C. Magee, Albuquerque newspaper editor, and Daniel J. Leahy, former district judge in Las Vegas, left death in its wake here today after breaking out last night in the form of a rough and tumble fight in which Magee drew a revolver and fired suddenly, killing a bystander, John B. Lassater, and wounding Leahy in the arm.

Leahy, witnesses said, attacked Magee on seeing him in the hotel lobby. The editor had been pummeled to the floor by the ex-jurist when he whipped out his gun and the first shot snuffed out Lassater's life as he moved to separate the fighters.

Magee was permitted to remain at his hotel after the battle but Assistant District Attorney Truider announced that he would be charged with manslaughter.

Magee Grief Stricken.
"I regret more than anything this terrible occurrence and am grief-stricken over it," Magee told newspapermen.

The fight and shooting close another chapter in the high tension career of Magee. In July, 1923, he was convicted of libel by a jury in Judge Leahy's court in connection with the publication of editorial attacks on Chief Justice J. W. Parker of the New Mexico Supreme Court. Sentenced to prison by Leahy, he was pardoned by the then Governor J. F. Hinkle before being taken to the penitentiary.

Again Jailed by Leahy.
A year later he was hauled into court by Leahy for editorially criticizing the court while other charges in connection with the libel case, were pending. This time it was a contempt case. Leahy held him in contempt and sentenced him to three months imprisonment. In pronounced sentence, Judge Leahy branded Magee as a miscreant in the strongest of judicial terms. He served one day and one night in jail and Hinkle pardoned him again.

Discovering "Little Black Hatchet."
Magee is credited with having aided in starting the investigation leading to the discovery of the "little black hatchet" of Teapot Dome fame.

Magee bought the Albuquerque Morning Journal from Fall in 1920 and in 1924 gave evidence to the oil committee regarding Fall's financial condition.

Carroll, Ill., Aug. 22—(A. P.)—Oscar "Red" Amos, ex-convict and notorious police character, was arrested late Friday and placed in the county jail, charged with conspiracy with Mrs. William Hethman, age 22, in an attempt to kill her husband by rat poison, so that she would be free to marry Amos.

Hethman, it is believed, was saved from death only by the delivery to Deputy Sheriff Leslie Roche of a letter, Mrs. Hethman had written to Amos, revealing the poison plot. A search of the residence where the Hethmans live was made immediately after the letter was intercepted and a new package of rat poison was found hidden in a stove.

Mrs. Hethman confessed to putting rat poison in the coffee for her husband. He had become violently ill but did not die. Out of consideration for her small children, one a baby of only six months, Mrs. Hethman has not yet been arrested.

Pare, cut in quarters and core pears. Make syrup of sugar and water, add pears and cook until tender. Add cherries and syrup if wanted and remove from the fire. Keep hot until needed. Wash rice. Put in top of double boiler with milk, 1/2 cup sugar, salt and butter. Add to the boiling point and then cook over hot water until tender. Add yolks of eggs well beaten and remove on a large deep dish, making a depression in the center. Fill with pears and syrup. Cover the whole with the whites of the eggs beaten until stiff and dry with 4 tablespoons sugar.

BY CYNTHIA GREY—

Lack of Neatness Breaks Up Many a Happy Home.

Some folks have company manners and others have company looks. I know one girl who appears most attractive when she goes out with her beau. She knows just how far to go with her lipstick and can do something to a hat that makes it look better on her than on anyone else. She has an instinct for colors and line.

But you should see her at home! As her small brother says, "She never wastes any looks on her own family."

She never combs her hair until she gets ready to go out. Just anything that happens to be within reach from a rowdy, dirty negligee to her brother's motor coat serve her as a costume when she is seen only by her family.

This isn't because she is pressed by many duties or because she is poor but because she is selfish. It never occurs to her that she has any obligations to look presentable for anyone but herself and her beau.

And unless my guess is wrong, when she is married to the young man who has seen her only when she was looking her best, she will soon become careless with him. And that man will get a surprise.

Neatness and careful grooming is a habit just as eating and sleeping are. Naturally, children are not neat. They have to be taught to wash their hands, comb their hair and take a pride in their appearance. Gradually it becomes second nature to them and they are uncomfortable unless they are tidy.

If people have not been taught to be neat, just as if they have not been taught to be polite, they lapse into untidiness when they feel they are not under inspection.

Lack of neatness on the part of a husband or wife has probably been responsible for as many divorces as lack of money.

A woman who is naturally neat will find it very disillusioning to be married to a man who neglects to shave and doesn't care anything about his personal appearance.

A man who idealizes a woman as a thing of exquisite beauty and daintiness is going to find it hard sledding getting along with one who is slovenly and who doesn't comb her hair until evening—particularly if he never suspected she had such tendencies.

Today neat little house dresses cost next to nothing. Soap, water and combs are cheap. There's no excuse for any of us not presenting a neat and tidy appearance even though we may not have large allowances.

To be neat is not only an obligation to ourselves, but merely an act of courtesy and consideration to those about us. Let's try our company manners and company looks at home as well as abroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Krehl and Frank Swingle, Mrs. Krehl's father former residents of this place but now of Greencastle, Ind., visited the home town a few days the last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Krehl grew up here and have never lost their interest in the home folks, though their work keeps them from coming back as often as they might wish. They are managers of a Children's Home in Greencastle and doing a fine work there, for which they are specially well fitted. This home was endowed through the will of a former resident of the place, and its affairs are administered through a board of trustees which is self-perpetuating, vacancies being filled by a vote of those remaining. The home is a large Colonial style and stands on an ideal place for a company of children to live who have been deprived of home and parents. There are present twenty on children in the home of all ages from two to nine.

The endowment provides for a high school education for all of them and two years of college for those who wish it, and endeavors to do all possible to fit them for a place in life.

Three of the children accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Krehl on their vacation trip and little Edward, the baby of the home, won all hearts by his winsomeness. Mr. and Mrs. Krehl are happy in their work and their many friends wish them success and a useful life for all those in their care.

A few weeks ago the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church sent a package of old muslin and linen and another of used post cards to Miss Maren Bording of Kongju, Korea. Miss Bording is a medical missionary who is working for the mothers and children of that part of Korea, and she sent word back to the home women that supplies of this kind would be very helpful in her work. Recently a letter was received by the society, acknowledging the receipt of the boxes and expressing thanks for the same.

Miss Bording told in a most interesting way of her child welfare work in that far away land, where formerly less than 50 per cent of the babies born lived to reach one year, now through the work of the instruction classes for mothers, the baby clinics and the hospital care for those needing it, that condition is being helped much. But as always in mission work the need is very great and buildings and equipment are inadequate. But there are many encouraging things about the work. She told of a "baby contest" held last May where out of the babies brought, there were twenty almost perfect ones.

A box of supplies has also been sent recently to Miss Dorothy Jones in Chungking, West China. Miss Jones is the missionary from this district and has been in our town several times. Her work is in a girls' school and while their needs are different from those of Miss Bording, yet they are equally important. The box contained mostly towels, soap, washcloths and needlework materials. Several persons who were not members of the society contributed to these boxes and the committee wish to specially thank all of these, as well as all others who helped to make up the boxes.

POSTAL REVENUE LOSS.

Postal revenue rates will be subject to revision by the next congress, it is now indicated. Whenever this matter is before the public, attention is called to the amount expended annually in carrying government mail without cost, but congress is blinded to the facts.

It is asserted that the cost of delivering this mail is $7,000,000 a year. The objection is not so much to the free use of the system for carrying on correspondence necessary to all of the departments, but to the burdening of the mails with matter that goes direct from the mailer to the waste basket.

Promotion bureaus operated by department press agents have sprung up throughout the government offices. All are flooding the mails with their propaganda and somebody has to pay for the transportation of this mail. The cost of producing the matter in the first place necessarily is enormous.

Congressmen have the privilege of sending to constituents without postage printed copies of addresses placed in the record, but never actually delivered in congress. Remarks "extended in the record" is the title of these addresses.

The privileges are so involved among the members of congress and the government departments, that a deaf ear is turned to all of the protests against such free use of the mails.

If this matter were read, or if half of it were read, there might be some reason for its distribution, but it will be difficult to convince the public that this propaganda and these printed speeches do anything except fill waste baskets of busy people.

When President Coolidge vetoed the bill increasing compensation of postoffice employees, it was because no provision had been made for revenue to meet the increase. Hurriedly a bill was prepared which had for its purpose the raising of more revenue from carrying of the mails. There was great objection to the manner in which the additional tax was levied, and by many who gave attention to details of the law it was considered a hodge podge. Haste with which it was prepared probably was accountable for such deficiencies as it has.

Because of these objections a commission was appointed, with Senator Moses as its chairman, to give full consideration to a revised rate schedule during the congressional vacation.

The first experience under the new law indicated that it would not produce the revenue anticipated. It appears now that a better showing is being made, the June revenues exceeding those of June, 1924, by $9,000,000.

It is a safe prediction that the matter will be adjusted without giving consideration to elimination of the government's waste in use of the mails, which has been in evidence many years.

COAL FIELD MANEUVERS.

Coal miners and operators of the anthracite fields have broken off negotiations. Unless the parley is resumed, nothing remains except for the calling out of the 155,000 workers upon expiration of their wage agreement September 1.

President Coolidge has shown no disposition to rush into the controversy. That he will take a hand in the event that a serious situation develops, no one doubts. There is time enough for that after the strike is called.

John L. Lewis, head of the miners' union, says he wants no arbitration. He was given a committee of representatives of the operators with which to carry on negotiations, but after some days he demanded that Chairman Warriner of the anthracite operators' organization and certain others should do the negotiating. He declined to deal further with the chosen representatives, although Warriner said they were clothed with full power.

Operators have asked for arbitration and provision that work shall be continued while the arbiters are reaching a decision. Mr. Lewis does not want that.

"We really do not care to arbitrate," said Lewis in his reply to Warriner. "Thanks for your offer. We know that you think the medicine would be good for us, but frankly, we have little faith in your diagnosis. It will be long before we recover completely from your previous arbitration treatment, and, until we do, we will modestly decline to accept your prescription."

The arbitration referred to by Lewis is that conducted through mediation of President Wilson, when the miners asked an increase of 27 percent and were awarded 17 percent more in wages.

There is enough coal on hand to supply the regions in the north that need to lay in their stores before navigation closes. Consumption of anthracite coal has been affected by the strikes. Other more certain means of obtaining fuel have been adopted. Oil has been a great factor. The bituminous industry has had its open and closed seasons, but there are so many nonunion bituminous mines in operation that fuel is kept moving to meet emergencies.

In general the opinion is that none need be frightened about the fuel outlook. There is going to be coal. Congress will convene regularly in December, but in the event of a catastrophe it may be summoned sooner by the president.

The mining interests ought to be able to settle their own difficulties. If they can not do it, they know they have a president who settled a police strike.

It is reported that there are uncollected bail bonds amounting to $6,000,000 in Cook county. When the new state of Chicago is formed, it can collect its bonds and have a full treasury with which to begin.

BY CHESTER H. ROWELL.

California is seventy-five years old in September.

It is the end of a long period, as time is measured in our swift-moving western world. Yet Rome celebrated its thousandth anniversary 1677 years ago, during the brief reign of Philip and Arabian, and might have celebrated its two thousandth in 1248, under the fugitive Pope Innocent IV, and the excommunicated Emperor Frederick II, if it had not been too busy with the civil wars of Guelphs and Ghibellines.

Both these anniversaries came in periods of the very lowest ebb of Roman power, but Rome survived the ebb and the floods and is now well on in its third thousand years, is capital of Italy, seat of the pope, and the most impressive historic spot on earth. Compared with a history like that, our anniversaries are but as things of yesterday.

How will it be, two thousand years from now, when Rome, perhaps, will be numbered with Nineveh and Tyre. The great time of Rome was the era of the Mediterranean. The modern age has been the era of the Atlantic dominated by London, and now by New York.

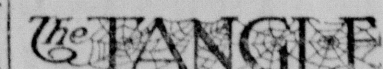

The future belongs to the Pacific. Around that greatest ocean dwell most of the human race, and into its harbors open the world's greatest resources. The Atlantic will take the place of the Mediterranean as the Mediterranean did of the Aegean.

Joining Races Over Pacific

The clash or the joining of races; the interaction of old civilizations in new contacts; the awakening of half the world—these will all happen across the Pacific.

They will be bigger things than ever happened before, because they will effect more people, inhabiting greater lands.

And California, facing the Pacific, with Oregon, Washington and British Columbia as its coadjutors, Europe and America as its back country, and the opening orient as its opportunity; with the climate and the beauty of Greece and a people descended from the ultimate pioneers of the boldest race—when some governor of California, in 2850 or some hierarchy of the world, in 3850 proclaims the thousandth or the two thousandth anniversary of California, will there not be a story to recall more majestic than even that of Rome?

LETTER FROM SYDNEY CARLE.

TO NTO PAULA PERIER.

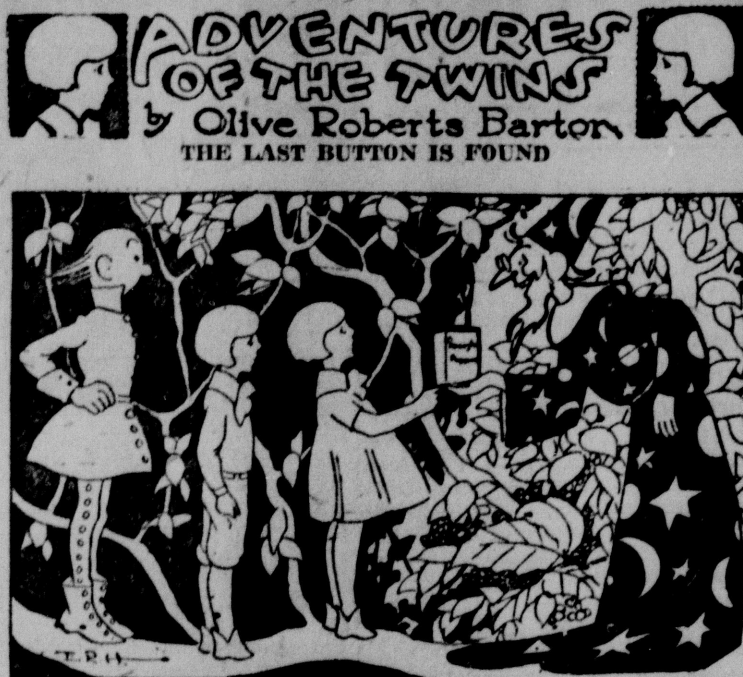

—CONTINUED—

Are you afraid to marry, Paula? Or are you bound down by one of those mid-Victorian complexes that makes you feel you are not worthy to marry any man? For heaven's sake, if you have this sort of an obsession, snap out of it as soon as possible.

I have said many times that any woman is good enough for any man, and certainly, Paula, if I had not been in love with some other woman most of my life, I am sure I would have fallen in love with you and considered it a great honor if you would have accepted me.

There! There's almost a declaration for you. It is the first time I have ever been so foolish as to make it, but I know, my dear girl, it is as safe with you as though I had kept it in my heart which has been aching with its burden lately.

Write me what you decide upon doing, for I am quite curious in

And the Green Wizard willingly and gladly gave them a lot of sneezeless pepper.

"Everything of the birch bark notes have been heard from," said Will O' the Wisp to the Twins. "And no one seems to know a thing about the last lost button you are hunting."

Juggle Jump, the fairman, juggled the buttons in his pockets, then he said, "Well, I think we shall have to make these eleven buttons do. Time is going and the Fairy Queen will wonder where we are."

"How many buttons were there?" asked Will O' the Wisp.

"Twelve," said Nancy.

"Couldn't you sew up one button hole," suggested Mister Will.

Juggle Jump considered. Would it be possible to keep Puff's coat closed with eleven pearl buttons if he took a violent sneezing spell, or would it be better to keep on hunting until they found the other button?

Suddenly he laughed aloud. "I've just thought of something," he said. "I'll go to the grocery store and get some sneezeless pepper. Then the eleven buttons will not only be enough, but they will be sure to stay on because Puff won't sneeze any more."

"I hope it will be as you say," said Will O' the Wisp, trimming the wick of his lantern and filling it with oil, as it was getting late and almost time for him to make his usual rounds as night watchman of Dixie Land.

"Thank you, I am sure we shall, if we look in the right place," said Juggle Jump.

So they all shook hands with Mister Will and said good-bye, and thanked him for helping them, and then as Juggle Jump pressed one of his hear; and remember that I am always your friend and as such will stand by you in whatever decision you make.

By the way, Paula, when is Mrs. Atherton coming back? I think Jack needs her very much. She keeps all the minor annoyances of his business away from him, and besides she is some one for him to talk to.

Isn't it strange that a man will talk to some woman and tell her secrets that he would not tell to another woman that he might love more?

Mrs. Atherton is a most peculiar woman and I think she is a splendid antidote for Jack's egotism.

I thought when I was over in Pittsburgh that Jack seemed a little edgy—in fact, for a minute I was afraid he was going to be jealous of Leslie and Melville Sartoris. Of course Sartoris is crazy about Leslie, but to be jealous of a woman who has shown her love for him in as many ways as Leslie has, is absurd.

Wouldn't it be nice if there were no misunderstandings in this world? If those we love could only see our hearts just as they are and not through eyes that are filled with the smoke of foolish prejudices and jealousies, what a grand world this would be!

You see I am moralizing more than usual because I have seen death so near not only to myself but to Jack and Leslie that I guess my nerves are rather ragged. If you were here, my dear, I am afraid I might do something foolish.

Anyway, I am going to stop before I write something mandrin, but I have so few friends that the thought of anything happening to any one of them throws me into a kind of blue funk.

If you should by any possibility see Melville Sartoris—and I rather think he will look you up because I saw a gleam of interest in his eye when I talked to him about you—be sure and write me everything that he tells you, and all that you say to him.

I know that sounds like an old magic buttons which said "ever and ever so small," the three travellers shrank to the size of pigmies. There were the three humming birds beside them waiting, and they all jumped on.

"Stop at the Green Wizard's house on your way to the Fairy Queen's palace," ordered Juggle Jump.

So away hummed the humming birds, and the Green Wizard willingly and gladly gave them a box of sneezeless pepper.

Then they turned in the direction of the Fairy Queen's palace which they reached at about five o'clock.

Puff was just getting tea. Everybody in the palace was cross, even the Fairy Queen's cat, for as the Twins learned afterward, not a decent thing had Puff cooked since they left. "For how?" said he, "could I cook with one hand? I had to hold my coat shut with the other."

"Well, well, I certainly am glad to see you," smiled the Fairy Queen. "Did you find any of the buttons?"

"Eleven," said Juggle Jump, emptying his pocket. "But the other one must be at the bottom of the sea. We looked and looked, and its no where on earth."

"Yes it is," laughed the Fairy Queen. "It was at the bottom of the soup. Puff found it in the soup kettle."

So if he loses all his buttons again, I see where the Twins will have it all to do over.

NEWS FROM DIXON

Y. M. C. A. WILL CONDUCT TENNIS TOURNAMENTS

The Dixon Y. M. C. A. Tennis Club has had a successful season, though not as many as playing tennis this year as formerly. The Y. M. C. A. through this Club maintains the only public tennis courts there are in this vicinity. They are located at Assembly Park and are busy most of the time. At this time of the year those who are lovers of the game are constantly practicing for the tournament which will be held in towns in this part of the state. It is most likely that Mount Morris will have the leading tennis tournament as it did last year.

The local club conducts two annual tournaments, two handsome silver loving cups are the prizes. Last year the boys' tournament was tied by Richard McNeil and Richard McMullen. Both boys played an exceedingly fast and consistent game and this year great things are expected from them in the tournament.

Men's singles went to H. Robertson and H. H. Bowen. They both play a game that is well worth seeing. This year a third tournament will be added for young ladies, providing there are a sufficient number of applications.

There will be a meeting of the members of the tennis club at the Y. M. C. A. next Monday night at 7:30 when club matters will be discussed and full arrangements made for the tournament. Any person playing tennis in the city or vicinity who wishes to take part in the tournament may do so by seeing the president of the club, William Johnson, or by calling at the Y. M. C. A.

Is Today Your Birth Anniversary?

SATURDAY, AUG. 22

If so, you are diplomatic. And a born fixer. You avoid trouble. And rarely make an issue. But you get your way. Because you are clever. You manage people in a kindly fashion. You know what you want. You have great confidence. And get it in the sanest way. You know you will succeed. That is the secret of your power. You inspire trust. And loyalty. You are artistic to a limited degree. And dextrous with your hands. You love lightly. And escape much trouble. You like home life. And are very fond of children.

SUNDAY, AUG. 23

If so, you are ambitious.

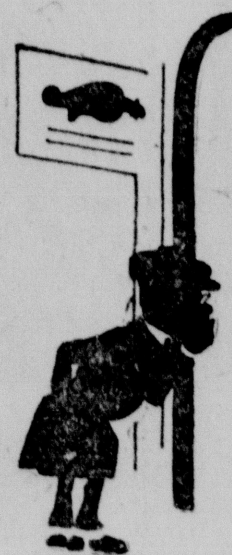

Commit thy works unto the Lord, and thy thoughts shall be established.—Prov. 16:3.

Whoso trusteth in the Lord, happy is he.—Bible.

Vitality, a companion of health, determines interest. Interest determines whether on works for love—freeman—or whether one works for fear—bondsmen. Love of work largely determines efficiency. Efficiency largely determines happiness. Happiness largely determines attitude toward God and man. Anything that preserves and promotes vitality then is a tremendous factor in efficiency, happiness and right attitude toward the here and hereafter.

It's easier to say, "Give me 'Mobil-oil'" than it is to say—"Give my engine a thorough overhauling and send me the bill!"

Motorists who have formed the habit of asking for Mobil-oil have almost forgotten what the second sentence sounds like.

That's why nearly every call for oil by name is a call for Mobil-oil.

GREAT FAIR WILL START TUESDAY IN AMBOY, LEE COUNTY

Splendid Races and Greatest Exhibits in History of Fair

Favorable weather next week is all that will be needed to make the sixteenth annual fair of the Lee County Fair Association at Amboy the best in the history of the association, for in every department—races, exhibits, and free attractions—the prospects are much better than ever before.

Calling off of the harness races in connection with the Central States Exposition at Aurora next week has brought many of the great drivers and horses which would have started there to Amboy, and some of the finest racing ever seen in this part of the state is in prospect for fans who attend the Amboy exposition next week.

Races Start Wednesday.
The racing program will start Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, with two races on the program; there will be three track events on Thursday, and two on Friday; a program which will bring together some of the best horses in this part of the state. Practically all of the horses which started at Pecatonica this week will be shipped to Amboy for next week's meeting, and there will be many others also, Secretary John M. Buckley announced today.

The fair will open Tuesday with a program arranged especially for the children, all of whom will be admitted free. Details of the children's events will be found elsewhere on this page.

Dancing At Night.
Wednesday the fair opens in earnest and each afternoon and evening there will be something doing on the grounds. There will be a baseball game each morning at 10 o'clock, free vaudeville by the best outdoor talent obtainable will be given between the heats of the races, and there will be dancing to the music of a high class orchestra each evening, in addition to the free acts by the vaudeville stars.

Have Splendid Exhibits
Every exhibit has more entries this year than ever before, and the agricultural and live stock exhibits are surpassingly large and fine. Machine, educational and domestic science displays are also unusually good and will provide much for patrons to inspect.

The grounds will be well lighted and will provide an excellent place for pleasure seekers to spend their evenings.

Everyone will be headed toward Amboy some time next week, and there will be hundreds who will attend the fair every day and evening.

ALL CHILDREN ARE INVITED TO FAIR AT AMBOY TUESDAY

Lee County Fair Association
Plans to Entertain
County Kids

The annual Lee county Fair will open Tuesday with a big day for the children of the community, the fair management arranging to admit all children free on the opening day and to provide a special program for their entertainment.

Parents are asked to attend on that day to see that their children get to the fair safely and to watch them enjoy themselves throughout the day. The arrangement to admit children free permits of families making arrangements for a picnic at the beautiful fair grounds park Tuesday, to eat their dinners under the fine shade trees and be there in time for the program of sports for the kiddies, which will commence promptly at 2:30 o'clock.

Start With Pony Races

First there will be a pony race, two out of three heats, and every boy in the county and vicinity who has a pony is urged to enter it in this race and make it a feature of the day.

Then there will be races for boys and girls, laced shoe races, sack races, wheelbarrow races, potato races, donkey races, relay races, etc., in which everyone who desires is privileged to enter.

Prizes in all the events of the afternoon will be awarded at the Secretary's office immediately after each race; then there will be a tug of war to be followed by a ball game between the Dixon Y. M. C. A. and the Amboy high school teams. Ward Miller of Dixon will umpire the game, which will be a good contest for everyone to watch.

Invite All Children

The fair association wants every child to attend on the opening day and have one great big outing of sport before school starts. There will be music galore, the midway and all exhibits will be open and complete and everything will be free for the youngsters.

TODD HART COPPED TROTTERING RACE AT CLEVELAND FRIDAY

Clinton Gelding Wins Second Stake of Week's Meeting

Cleveland, Aug. 22—(AP)—Todd Hart administered his fourth defeat of the year to Tommy Murphy's Trumpet Friday when he annexed the Century, $3,000 stake for 2:09 trotters, feature of the Grand Circuit races at North Randall. It was the second stake victory in a week for the gelding.

Each of the last quarters of the three heats were trotted in twenty-nine seconds or better, the first in 28.3 and the second one-fifth of a second faster.

Todd Hart took the first and third heats, but went into a break rounding the first turn in the second. He made up about eight lengths before turning into the stretch and was leading when thinking he had the lead won, Harry Putnam quit driving and was taken in the closest finish of the year.

After winning twelve consecutive heats, Norman Grattan, Sep Palin's good pacer, suffered his first defeat of the season today when Miss Czar Moko, making her first start for James P. Berry, Hartford, Conn., won the 2:12 pace. Norman Grattan led all the way in the first heat, which he won from Jean Grattan, pacing the first half in 59.1-5 seconds. Miss Czar Moko won the next two pulled up, equalling the world's record for seven eighths of a mile in the second.

The three year old pace was a straight heat victory for Bob Seymour Southward won the 2:16 trot.

ATHLETICS NEAR COLLAPSE LOST FIFTH STRAIGHT

Unmistakable Signs of Cracking on Part of Mackmen

New York, Aug. 22—(AP)—Beaten in five successive games, the Philadelphia Athletics today were on the verge of a total collapse.

Defeat of the Quaker City combination yesterday by the Chicago White Sox, 8-2, bore unmistakable signs of cracking on the part of Mack's entry. Pitchers were wild and ineffective against Collins' club, team hitting continued weak, while the defense was unsteady at crucial periods. Stealy was the big gun in the Sox attack with three singles and a double.

The tumble of Philadelphia lost the club no further ground in the American League race. Washington, one game in the lead, wet down before Detroit as Coveleskie lost an eleven inning pitching duel to Whitehill of the Tigers, 1-0. The reverses carried a double blow for the Senators who also lost their veteran first baseman Joe Judge. Concussion of the brain resulting from a blow on the head from a pitched ball put Judge in a hospital.

Boston Red Sox and St. Louis Browns matched long clouts in a game at St. Louis with the home side gunning outlasted the Hub artillery, 9-7. Rice, Boone and Todd made homers.

All the National League games were postponed on account of rain.

Garland Hukeye of the Indians turned in another of his good games and the Yanks bit the dust in the first game of their farewell series.

Tris Speaker, manager of the Indians, was unable to break into the pastime because of the blow he received on the left elbow when one of Fred Marberry's shots went astray in the final game of the Washington series Thursday.

Red Faber, veteran spitball twirler, of the White Sox, just breezed through the opening game against the Athletics. The Cascade wonder never had to exert himself, largely because of the wonderful playing behind him.

When Al Simmons, the deadly hitter of the Athletics, was fanned by Faber, the hearts of the fast traveling Athletics seemed to drop to such a low pitch that they were unable to get on their feet again.

The Chicago White Sox appear to be playing the smartest baseball in either league. The manner in which they execute double plays and run the bases is becoming the talk of all the clubs.

AUTOMOBILE DERBIES ON AURORA TRACK

Star Drivers Will Race at Central States Exposition.

The mile track at Exposition park will be turned over to automobile drivers of the country on the first Saturday and Sunday afternoons of the Central States Fair and Exposition, to be held August 21 to 29. A total of $8,000 has been appropriated by the fair association for purses.

More than 30 of the best drivers in the country, including Les Allen, of Chicago, who recently won the 100 mile western championship on the Aurora track, will compete. The race will be open to the world.

Secretary Clifford R. Trimble is planning to make the automobile race the greatest that have ever been staged on a fair grounds.

The new mile track is ideal for an automobile racing, as was demonstrated in the recent 100-mile event for the western championship. It is true that the first turn is one of the most dangerous in the country and feared by all drivers, but in the recent 100-mile race only three cars crashed into the fence there. Luckily all escaped unharmed.

MAY SEYMOUR FOOT LOOSE

by BEATRICE BURTON
SEQUEL TO "THE FLAPPER WIFE"

ONEA

THE STORY SO FAR:

MAY SEYMOUR, whose husband killed himself because of her love affair with JIM CAREWE, returns home after a year's absence. She disposes of her inherited property, and with $8000 in her handbag, sets out to find and marry a man with money.

At Atlantic City she meets a divorcee, CARLOTTA FROLKING, and Carlotta's friends, HERBERT WATERBURY and DAN SPRAGUE. Both men pay suit to May, to the distress of Carlotta who has been in love with Dan for several years.

May makes up her mind that Waterbury is the millionaire husband she has set her heart upon, does her best to bring a proposal of marriage from him, and fails.

He has his yearly attack of rheumatism and tells May he intends to winter in California. About this time Carlotta asks May to spend the winter there with her, in her bungalow in the Los Altos hills. May accepts.

One cold afternoon, while she and Waterbury are sitting in the lobby of their Boardwalk hotel, a young friend of Waterbury's, JACK DARNLEY, appears. He and May dance together in the submarine room while the rheumatic Waterbury looks on with jealous eyes. May decides to use the boy's infatuation for her, to increase Waterbury's jealousy. She goes out to meet him that night on the Steel Pier.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

MAY'S heart beat high with excitement as she raced along in the windy darkness on her way to meet young Jack Darnley.

This, for her, was adventure of an entirely new sort. May always thrilled to adventure as a spoiled child enjoyed a brand-new toy.

Besides, a love affair with Jack Darnley was the very thing she needed just now—it was sure to make Herbert Waterbury wildly jealous. "No doubt about it!"

"If he doesn't ask me to marry him within a week, I miss my guess," May said to herself, as she flew along. "Anyway, this is no time for me to leave for California. I'll let Carlotta go on ahead—and follow later."

The Steel Pier loomed large and black against the grey background of the sky and sea. And here on a bench, in the shadows of a few yards from the Boardwalk, the boy waited for her.

He seized May's hands in his, drew her close to him; and simply—as if he had done it a hundred times before—he kissed her on her lifted lips. In the darkness, May smiled.

"I suppose this is dreadful of me," she sighed, as they sat down. "But somehow or other, I don't care." "Why is it so dreadful for me to kiss you? You're not engaged to old Waterbury, are you?" Jack asked.

"Of course not, silly," May answered. "But I'm a lot older than you. And besides, you're probably engaged, yourself, to some nice girl or other."

She let her voice drop wistfully at the end of the sentence.

"There's no girl anywhere—," Jack began, and then kissed her again violently. May could feel that he trembled, "—but you! Not now!"

"No girl but you!" he repeated. There was a touch of defiance in his voice. "And suppose you are four or five years older than I am?"

"A week from today—let's be married then!" she said. "Shall we?"

I'm a lot older than I seem—I've been around a lot. You probably read about me and Jill Jonson in the papers last year."

"You mean Jill Jonson, the show girl?" May asked. She seemed dimly to remember some story or other about Jill Jonson's marriage to a millionaire college boy months before.

"Yeh, Jill and I were married right after the Thanksgiving football game last year," Jack said proudly. "Just got my divorce the other day. Jill was quite some kid—"

He turned toward May again, held her close in his muscular young arms, and bent her head back with the violence of his kisses.

"You don't mind if I do this. Do you?" he whispered. "Because I can't help it! You're the sweetest thing—"

But suddenly May pulled away from him. She gave a little shudder. "Ugh! You've been drinking!" she cried. "I can smell whiskey on your breath!"

Jack laughed. "Just a drop before dinner, little Sunday school teacher," he said. "And what of it, anyway? Everybody drinks nowadays."

"Don't you worry about me—I've been on some pretty good stew parties in my time," he went on with a sad dog air. "And I must say I can carry my liquor without making too big a fool of myself!"

"You're a regular man of the world, aren't you?" May asked with cutting humor, and was sorry at once. For she saw that she had hurt his feelings.

"No, I really meant that," she hastened to say. "You really are, for such a young kid!"

"Young kid, yourself!" Jack's voice came out of the darkness, resentfully. "I'll bet when it comes to actual experience, I'm ten years older than you, easily—"

"I don't doubt it!" May answered solemnly. And giggled to herself.

Am I going to see you tomorrow?" Jack Darnley wanted to know, as he left May at the door of her hotel.

"I breakfast at nine, usually," she said, giving him an upward glance, and then dropping her lashes coquettishly.

"Here, in your hotel?"

"Here in my hotel—in the main dining room," May answered. "At nine then?"

She knew that Herbert Waterbury invariably breakfasted there at exactly nine o'clock every morning.

"Good morning, children," he greeted them without a smile, pulling out a chair and dropping heavily into it. He turned to Jack.

"I've forgotten my cane," he said. "I wonder if you'd mind running up to my room for it, my boy? Number 312—Here's the key."

Jack stared, sputtered and obeyed. The instant he had left the table, Waterbury took one of May's hands in his, and pressed it until it hurt.

"What are you trying to do to me?" he asked.

"I?" May's eyes were wide with innocent astonishment. "I?" "Yes, you!" Waterbury growled, frowning. "Where were you last night?—Not in your room. I tried to telephone you five times! And now, this morning, I find that boy dogging your heels—"

"He has a perfect right to dog my heels, as you call it!" retorted May, lifting a defiant little chin. "As a matter of fact, I like to have him around."

"Oh, you do, do you?" Waterbury's voice was filled with cold sarcasm.

"Well, he's a thoroughly bad young scamp. Ran away last year with some chorus girl or other, and married her. And now, before the ink's dry on his divorce decree, they tell me he's running around with another one of 'em!"

May laughed. "Are you trying to make me jealous of a chorus girl?" she asked cheerfully.

"No, but I want to give you the low-down on this kid. In his nice, easy-going way he's vicious," Waterbury answered. "He smokes like a chimney and drinks like a fish—and always has since he was knee-high to a grasshopper. But if you want to play College Widow to him, go ahead—I won't try to stop you! All I ask is that you get rid of him for a while, because I want to talk to you—"

"Now?" May asked.

"Now," the man answered, as Jack Darnley came back to the table, carrying the malacca cane like a drawn sword.

"Here's your crutch, sir," he said cheerfully, taking his place at the table.

"Don't you kid me, you young cub," Waterbury growled. "You'll be forty five, yourself, some day—and if you're half the man I am, then, you can count yourself lucky!"

He turned his shoulder upon the exuberant Jack, and questioned May with his eyes. "Ready to go, now?" he asked.

"Do not mind if I run away?" May asked young Darnley. "Mr. Waterbury says he has some urgent business to talk over with me—See you later?"

Jack Darnley rose politely, and with round eyes of astonishment, stood watching the pair leave the dining room. At the door May turned slightly, and over her shoulder she threw him a smile.

MAY drew her fur coat close around her, as she and Herbert Waterbury left the hotel. It was very cold outside.

"Blasted climate!" Herbie vented his ill-humor upon the weather. "Geeooks! But I'd like to be in California this morning!"

"When do you leave?" May asked calmly. She felt herself mistress of this situation.

"That depends upon you," Waterbury answered. He turned suddenly and took her by the shoulders, to the thrilled amazement of three maiden ladies who were taking their constitutional along the Boardwalk. "When are you going to marry me?"

May drew a long, sobbing breath—the sort of gasp that an Olympic runner gives at the end of a long race.

"When do you want me to?" she asked, in a tone so low that Waterbury could barely hear what she said.

"Today."

"Oh, no, not today," May shook her head.

She knew that if she married Waterbury the trip to California would be their honeymoon. And she didn't want to go to California until her money for the sale of the house came.

"I won't say a thing about it—I'll just tuck it away for a nest egg," she thought, practically. "Twelve thousand dollars of my very own!"

Why it was more than $12,000—for she still had $2000 in her handbag!

A sense of triumph flooded her like warm sunshine.

She had done what she had planned to do! She had landed the millionaire husband she wanted, almost without effort!

And if she felt that there was something lacking in this matter-of-fact proposal of marriage—something of Romance, perhaps—what was the difference?

The great thing was that she had landed Herby, and that Herby had money, the thing she desired beyond all other earthly things!

She looked up at Waterbury, and her face glowed.

"A week from today—let's be married then!" she said. "Shall we?" (To Be Continued)

When this Happens,
we cannot help you!

Every home contains valuable papers and other things which deserve more protection than a tin box and a front door lock . . . things no amount of fire or burglar insurance can replace. Keep them at home and when thieves or flames remove them, we are unable to do anything but express sympathy.

Our safety deposit boxes in this bank are low in price, but mighty in safeguarding the things you wish to keep. Handy, too!
